

The Southwest Florida Reading Festival

Battle of the Teen Bands

We attended the Southwest Florida Reading Festival this past weekend, located in Ft. Myers. It was our first time at this fair, so I'm glad we had plenty of company in the Sisters in Crime booth.

Gwen Mayo, Wendy Dingwall, Sarah Glenn and Kait Carson meet the public

Wendy Dingwall, our chapter president, gave us plenty of useful advice we'll use in future books fairs. We met both readers and writers, and I hope we made some new friends, too.

Next week: the Venice Book Fair.

Amelia Island Book Fair

Amelia Island is located near Jacksonville, so it was quite a drive. It was worth it, though. There was plenty to see and hordes of authors to meet.

The fair took place at the local middle school. Our friends from the Florida Authors and Publishers Association were also there, including Diane Wilson Harper and illustrator/author Mark Wayne Adams.

The evening after the author expo, the Golden Crown Literary Society held readings and a book signing at Sliders Seaside Grill. That's Gwen seated at the table.

Great fun was had by all!

Welcome!

12/7/2016

0 Comments

Welcome to my new web site. If you don't know who I am, I'm impressed that you stumbled over my page. Still, as long as you're here...

- I am the editor-in-chief and one of the owners of Mystery and Horror, LLC. Our press prints stories in these genres (surprise!), with a definite tilt towards the weird. Our longest-running series, and my favorite, is Strangely Funny.
- I'm also an author. Most of my tales are short stories, simply because I'm impatient, but I have a couple of novels. The first, All This and Family, Too, is a vampire satire published by the late, lamented Pill Hill Press. It may find its way into print again, since I've been futzing around with a follow-up. My new novel, Murder on the Mullet Express, was co-written by Gwen Mayo and will come out in January.
- I'm a working stiff. Like most authors, I have a day job. Don't tell me not to quit it; economics has already informed me of that. One day, I hope to retire and write full-time. That, and feel less guilty about playing useless games and solving crosswords. I stand on my brain all day and need breaks.

I'm pleased you came by!

- Sarah
